1. During May and June 1951, Soviet Army engineer units were in the Caransebes area in the Banat region of Rumania. On a small mountain called Muntele Mic near the town the Soviets are alleged to have begun the construction of V-2 rocket sites. Circulation in the area has been restricted since the arrival of the Soviet units. Special permits are necessary to travel to the Caransebes area. The railroad line which leads to the top of the small mountain is used exclusively by Russian skilled personnel and for the transport of materials which are manufactured at the Regita steel plant. The railroad cars are accompanied by Soviet soldiers. ✓
2. Earlier rumors dating back to the fall of 1950 circulated that V-2 sites were to be constructed on a mountain near the town of Cluj in western Transylvania. It is not known if such sites had ever been constructed. ✓
3. Rumanian parachutist maneuvers took place on 6 June 1951 at the Pipera airfield outside of Bucharest. The maneuvers were under the supervision of Soviet officers. X
